

Presenting an opportunity for your organization to benefit from a new model in university-industry partnering – a model in which academic research is applied directly to improving the overall performance of your enterprise.

The Institute for Knowledge and Innovation (IKI) was founded at the George Washington University in 2001 by Dr. Michael Stankowsky and Dr. William Halal. In 2008, a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) was signed between the George Washington University and Bangkok University in order to open a new branch of IKI in South-East Asia based in Bangkok, Thailand.

IKI is a not-for-profit institute

The Institute and its Partners are Creating a New Research Paradigm that Rapidly Migrates Theory to Practice

You will be joining an elite group of sponsors & partners

Benefit you will receive as a sponsor/partner: you will gain the publication of your work in the communities of other authors and advance preferential registration on conferences, for free services, and